SCHEDULE 1.

Sec. 68.

SAVINGS AND TRANSITIONAL PROVISIONS.

1. In this Schedule—

“authorised” means duly authorised by a court or person;

“bail” means bail that was authorised or granted before the commencement of this Schedule, so far as it could not have been so authorised or granted if this Act had then been in force;

“law” means any law, but does not include the Justices Act, 1902, the Crimes Act, 1900, the Child Welfare Act, 1939, the Criminal Appeal Act, 1912, or the Supreme Court (Summary Jurisdiction) Act, 1967;

“recognizance of bail” means a recognizance that was authorised or entered into before the commencement of this Schedule, so far as it could not have been so authorised or entered into if this Act had then been in force.

2. This Act does not affect bail authorised or granted, or a recognizance of bail authorised or entered into, under a law before the commencement of this Schedule in relation to an accused person, and for the purposes of or for purposes connected with any such bail or recognizance this Act shall be deemed not to have been enacted.

3. Nothing in clause 2 prevents the making of a decision under this Act, or the exercise or performance of a power, authority, duty or function thereunder, in respect of an offence or other matter (or any proceedings in connection therewith) to or with which the bail or recognizance of bail referred to in that clause relates or is connected.

4. The regulations or the rules referred to in section 70 may make other provisions of a savings or transitional nature consequent upon the enactment of this Act in connection with any law, and those provisions may, but need not, operate by reference to any provision of this Act and shall have effect notwithstanding anything in clause 2 or 3.
