FUTURES CONTRACTS.

Commodity futures contract.

A commodity futures contract is a contract the effect of which is that—

- (a) one party agrees to deliver to the other party at a specified future time a specified commodity, or a specified quantity of a specified commodity, at a specified price payable at that time; or
- (b) the parties will make an adjustment between them at a specified future time in Australian currency according to whether a specified quantity of a specified commodity is worth more, or worth less, in Australian currency at that time than it was worth in Australian currency at the time of the making of the contract, the difference being determined in accordance with the business rules of the futures market at which the contract is made.

Currency futures contract.

A currency futures contract is a contract the effect of which is that the parties will make an adjustment between them at a specified future time in Australian currency according to whether a specified amount of foreign currency is worth more, or worth less, in Australian currency at that time than it was worth in Australian currency at the time of the making of the contract, the difference being determined in accordance with the business rules of the futures market at which the contract is made.

Share index futures contract.

A share index futures contract is a contract the effect of which is that the parties will make an adjustment between them at a specified future time in Australian currency according to whether the Australian Stock Exchanges
