[2] Section 34A (1)

Insert at the end of section 34A (1):

Note. Section 601WBA of the Corporations Act 2001 of the Commonwealth enables ASIC to make a transfer determination if:

- (a) ASIC has cancelled the licence of the transferring company (in which case the determination is called a compulsory transfer determination), or
- (b) the transferring company has applied for such a determination (in which case the determination is called a voluntary transfer determination).

Explanatory note

Section 601WBA of the Corporations Act 2001 of the Commonwealth (as recently amended by the Corporations and Other Legislation Amendment (Trustee Companies and Other Measures) Act 2011 of the Commonwealth) enables the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) to make a determination that there is to be a transfer of estate assets and liabilities from a trustee company (the transferring company) to another licensed trustee company (the receiving company). To make this determination, ASIC must be satisfied (amongst other things) that legislation to facilitate the transfer that satisfies the requirements of section 601WBC of the Corporations Act 2001 has been enacted in the State or Territory in which the transferring company and receiving company are situated.

Prior to the recent amendments made to section 601WBA of the Corporations Act 2001, ASIC could only make a transfer determination if ASIC had cancelled the transferring company's registration. These kinds of determinations are called compulsory transfer determinations. Following the amendments, ASIC may also make a transfer determination on the application of the transferring company. These new kinds of determinations are called voluntary transfer determinations.

Section 34A of the Trustee Companies Act 1964 (the Act) was originally enacted to satisfy the requirements of section 601WBC of the Corporations Act 2001 for New South Wales legislation in relation to compulsory transfer determinations.

The proposed amendments to section 34A of the Act ensure that the section will now extend to voluntary transfer determinations made by ASIC as well as to compulsory transfer determinations.
